Pretty but Deadly: Control Your Tansy Ragwort

The bright yellow flowers of Tansy Ragwort (Senecio jacobaea) may provide a striking view, but don't let the looks fool you. This invasive weed is deadly to many grazing animals. Tansy ragwort contains alkaloids that are lethal to most livestock, with death occurring after consuming 3-8% of body weight. As such, it is very important for landowners across Clackamas County to control this invasive weed, especially near grazing animals or in areas where hay is produced.
